History

Château Favray was distinguished by the presence of Françoise de la Rivière, lady in waiting of Queen Margot, the wife of Henri IV. When she married François de Reugny in 1602, she became Dame de Favray. Her tombstone and effigy are preserved in the chapel of a neighboring village.

It was probably during this period that the Château Favray vineyard first flourished. A magnificent eighteenth century press testifies to the thriving winemaking activity of numerous generations.

In 1980, Quentin David decided to bring the winemaking vocation back to life at Château Favray

The top value of the domaine

The vineyards are on the hill and get a good homogeneity, a perfect structure.

A few woods

Historical château, on one slope with a great exposure. Complex and ripe

Quentin associates minerality to maturity by harvesting latter than most of the other growers of the region
